

Acts 29 David

In the region north of the city called Atlanta, there is a man named David, a bondservant of the Most High, filled with the Holy Spirit. A son, a brother, a husband, and father he is known far and wide for his intense joy in his friendship with the Lord Jesus, freedom from the yoke of religion, gift of creative encouragement, and power to overcome.

David bears witness to the one true God of the Bible, Yahweh, who still speaks. His walk of faith is like an old radio tuned to heavenly frequencies, catching laughter and the goodness from above and turning it loose on earth. Having done battle with the spirit of religion, he regularly leads others on an epic journey from head to heart, liberating fellow warriors from offense, fear of man, and religious systems.

You will find David there with many other men and women of this region and beyond, continuing the good work they've established under the mighty name of Jesus—binding up the brokenhearted, proclaiming liberty to captives, breaking curses of the enemy, exchanging lies for truth, and calling sons and daughters into reconciliation with their Father. Their motto in the Spirit—"Freely we have received; freely we give"—has become a rallying call for many, who come from far and wide to receive.

In the years ahead, David will lead hundreds to freedom, healing, and restoration, use his creative gifts to awaken faith and imagination, equip others to exhort, encourage, and comfort, destroy many strongholds of fear, rejection, obligation, guilt, and shame, and declare the Kingdom of God boldly without compromise.

David's Declarations

I pledge loyalty to King Jesus.

I carry and use the keys of the Kingdom.

I speak life, I release freedom, I build with honor.

I walk boldly and humbly into every assignment He gives me.

I abide and do not strive.

I am in Him, and He is in me.
